HIGHLIGHTS

CROSS-CUTTING TRAINING

To train students for key positions in marketing at all levels, the curriculum includes a wide range of specific knowledge and skills. The analytical, technical and digital aspects of marketing are explored to ensure mastery of the latest marketing practices. The skills base is reinforced by practical applications all along the curriculum, allowing graduates to meet the growing market demand for specialised profiles. They become highly skilled managers capable of accessing strategic marketing positions worldwide.

4 SPECIALISATIONS WITH ADDED VALUE

The training draws on the expertise of a highly reputable faculty made up of researchers, innovators and educators contributing to the courses. They are part of the renowned research Research Centre "Marketing & New Consumption" whose research delves into highly topical marketing issues. Students get to interact in this globalised environment with an awareness of their local community and the wider world. Upon graduation, they will be equipped to address the upcoming challenges of the sector.

HIGHLY DIVERSE TEACHING BODY

The programme offers industry-specific learning through four areas of expertise: brand management, negotiation and key account management, international marketing, communications and event management. Delivered across 3 campuses, these expertise tracks allow students to apply problem-solving techniques to complex and challenging marketing issues. This sectoral approach is designed to meet students' individual goals and prepare them for fulfilling careers in all marketing functions.
